The Authority commends its staff for their continuous support in spreading cheer during this and every Christmas.

CIMA Participates in 25th Annual Captive Forum

CIMA staff participated in the 25th annual Cayman Captive Forum hosted by the Insurance Managers Association of Cayman (IMAC). The forum took place from 28 – 30 November 2017 at The Ritz-Carlton. Each year, the event attracts almost 1,500 insurance specialists from around the world.

Representatives from CIMA participated in several panel discussions and television interviews, sharing insight into the success of the Cayman Islands insurance industry, from a regulatory perspective. Presenters included: CIMA's Board Director, Mr. Garth McDonald, Deputy Managing Director – Supervision, Mrs. Anna McLean, Head of Insurance Supervision Division, Mr. Ruwan Jayasekera, along with Deputy Heads, Mrs. Suzanne Sadlier and Mr. Razaak Busari, and Chief Analyst, Ms. Kara Ebanks.

Some of the presentations also highlighted the current state of the industry including Cayman's position in the captive industry and the opportunities which lie ahead.

During one of the A.M. BestTV television interviews, Mr. Jayasekera commented that, "The outlook for 2018 remains extremely positive based on the trends in the last three to four years in terms of company formations and expansions." He also highlighted potential effects of the market in 2018 as a result of the recent hurricane activities. Mr. Jayasekera explained that this will be good news for Cayman as it will attract more investment in Cat bonds.

Another topical issue was the revolution of insurtech. During a separate interview, Mrs. Sadlier mentioned that CIMA continues to position itself to be able to react, adapt, and ensure that the Authority can regulate such emerging technologies as necessary. She added, "The impact will be quite substantial to the captive industry in terms of identifying risks and managing exposures."

Overall, the forum was a great platform to promote the performance of the industry and discuss the issues affecting the world and the jurisdiction.

Another Successful Fraud Prevention Seminar

Deputy Managing Director - Operations, Patrick Bodden presents remarks on behalf of CIMA.

On Tuesday, 7 November 2017, the Authority along with the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service's (RCIPS) Financial Crime Unit (FCU) and the Cayman Islands Chamber of Commerce hosted its 9th annual "Know Your Money" Fraud Prevention Seminar.

Representatives from the Cayman Islands banknote printers, De La Rue, First Caribbean Bank and the United States Secret Service discussed a wide range of topics.

Throughout the presentation, attendees were able to inspect a series of genuine and counterfeit KYD and USD notes. Participants heard about the different methods fraudsters use to reproduce currency, and more importantly, learned ways to detect them.

The US Secret Service agent also highlighted the different types of cybercrimes. One of these examples included phishing, a common challenge which individuals and companies face.

He told participants that they should always remain vigilant with emails claiming to be from banks, credit card companies, and other financial institutions. Most institutions have policies in place against personal information requests via emails. Therefore, persons should regard such emails with extreme scepticism.

Each year, the seminar is held prior to the holiday season as there tends to be an increase in cash transactions during that time of year.

As such, CIMA recognises that it is important to educate persons on methods that will prevent them from becoming victims of financial fraud.

Staff Attend FinReg Conference

Several staff members participated in the Caribbean Financial Regulatory Conference which took place from 21 - 22 November 2017. Hosted by SQL Power, the main purpose of the conference was to highlight effective regulation through the use of cutting edge software technology.

Presenters from CIMA included Head of Information Systems Division, Mr. Chuck Thompson, Head of Policy & Development Division, Ms. Justine Plenkiewicz and Systems Development Manager, Mr. David Bennett. All presentations highlighted the progression of CIMA's efforts in using technology to improve its supervisory and regulatory functions over the years.

Other expert speakers covered topics on the future of financial regulation from an artificial intelligence perspective, streamlining workflows to provide more efficient use of scarce resources, and moving towards structured data to improve regulatory functions.

According to event organisers, today's regulators are under tremendous pressure across three dimensions: the pace of change, the ever-increasing dynamics of risk and limited resources with which to respond.

Other CIMA staff members were also amongst the group of attendees.

Presentation to Law Students

Mrs. Angelina Partridge shares details about CIMA's role to Truman Bodden Law School students.

During a presentation to Truman Bodden Law School students on Thursday, 4 January, CIMA's own Deputy General Counsel, Mr. André Mon Désir, and Senior Legal Counsel, Angelina Partridge, shared information about the Authority's role within the financial services industry, including the role of the Legal Division.

Mr. Mon Désir and Mrs. Partridge both explained that the division provides advice to the Board of Directors, the Managing Director, as well as to all the divisions within the Authority.

Additional duties include, but are not limited to, providing formal assistance to overseas regulatory authorities, developing legislation to combat money laundering and terrorist financing. The division is also responsible for coordinating memorandums of understanding and/or any related legal documents as well as managing all civil litigation matters.

New Strategic Plan Approved

The Board of Directors recently approved the Authority's new Strategic Plan for the 2018 – 2020 period.

The plan includes an updated list of objectives with much focus on the recent CFATF assessment. A revised SWOT analysis has also been incorporated. This information was generated from a self-assessment through surveys and feedback from the industry.

This exercise identified a number of areas in which the current regulatory regime is insufficient. While recent legislation, rules and guidance address some of these new and enhanced standards, additional measures are still under consideration.

It is also important to note that the document will be evaluated by the Authority's management team on a quarterly basis in order to gauge whether or not objectives are being met and targets reached. These reviews will also be used as a means to determine what adjustments, if any, are required to achieve the Authority's overall goal.

CFATF Assessment Update

Throughout the latter part of 2017, the Authority held a series of industry stakeholder dialogues, including several in-house training sessions, in preparation for the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force (CFATF) assessment which took place from 4 - 15 December 2017.

These presentations highlighted the concept of the risk-based approach, the proposed administrative fines including changes to the new Anti-Money Laundering Regulations (AMLRs).

The new AMLRS came into effect on 2 October 2017 and replaces the Money Laundering Regulations (2015 Revision). The recent legislation highlights structural and substantive changes, some of which include new definitions for specific terms and words, more specifically as they relate to the regulated sectors of CIMA. Guidance Notes were also designed to assist industry in understanding and applying the AMLRs. A copy of the 2017 AMLRs and Guidance Notes can be found on the Authority's website at www.cima.ky

Overall, and based on the feedback, the dialogue sessions were well received by industry. Other CIMA-driven stakeholder awareness presentations are due to take place in the future.
